

New chocolate beer to debut in Japan

The headline reads "A chocolate drink for adults, from Sapporo and Royce.*" Mmmm. Exactly the thing for people addicted to both.

Japan's Sapporo Brewery and domestic confectioner Royce will start selling Chocolat Brewery, a limited-edition beverage, starting next Wednesday, January 14. The bitter malt brew is infused with chocolate flavor and will be available order-only through the Sapporo website until just January 23 (with deliveries around February 10). A three-pack is priced at 1,480 yen, more than $5 per can.

The intro comes a month after Sapporo launched the Sapporo Hana Garden Project, an initiative the company hopes will generate new excitement for Sapporo products amongst Japanese women.
